Jan Severs, 78 years of age, was at work this past October when she fell and fractured her left shoulder. She went home that same day, but the pain did not get better. In fact, on Saturday, she went to the emergency room because of pain and confusion. Her emergency room physician referred her to St. Luke's Rehabilitation Hospital for care. Fortunately, the workers' compensation insurance companies were available on the weekend and eager to help. They worked together with our team to admit Ms. Severs quickly.

When she first arrived, Ms. Severs was in a great deal of pain and was quite confused. Because of that, she had a slow start in therapy. However, the team supported and encouraged her to keep working hard. Over the course of the next few weeks, she continued to improve, her pain subsided, and she became more alert and like herself again.

Ms. Severs was at St. Luke's from October 15 through November 3, 2022. She was excited to go home, be with her family, and see her dog. While at St. Luke's, she really enjoyed all the staff and their willingness to help
